The nettl Christmas CAROL

Dreaming beyond misted window, snow starts to fall
Reminiscing his first job, when he was ever so small

Mounting creaky delivery bike, bell a jingling
Breath frozen, little icy fingers a tingling

Up through the kissing gate, high on the hill
Pedalling and puffing in deep winter chill

Last drop for Ma Parker, third time this week
Door opens, slams, why doesn't she ever speak?

Head droops low, lip quivers in fading light
He grasps a card, handwritten late last night

She hears letterbox swing, watches him leave
Opens the envelope, astonished to receive

It's a heart-felt thanks for custom all year
"Oh...", deep remorse, eye forming a tear

To the eve of Christmas our tale now goes
He's climbing the hill, icicles biting his nose
But what's this at Ma Parker's, dusted in snow?
A parcel, his name tagged, he fumbles the bow

Frigid digits carefully peel back the wrap
A gift from her! Gloves, scarf and cap...

"Yikes!" vibrating phone abruptly breaks his gaze
Rudely transported back to present days

But that momentary flashback reminds him hence
Saying "thank you" just makes business sense

"Oh, hello Mrs Parker!" a smile forms as he says
"How's my very best customer doing today?"

DO PEOPLE STILL SEND CHRISTMAS CARDS?

Yeh, we get asked that a lot.

Of course they do.

Granted, you probably got fewer Christmas Cards last year than in 1999.

But think about one you did get.

Did you open it and think
"They shouldn't have bothered"?

Did you baubles.

You thought "ah, cute".

Or "ha! that made me smile"
or "oh yeh, I was meaning to get back in touch with them."

They say some things are best left unsaid.

But "thank you" isn't one of them.

ECOMMERCE

People staying indoors got used to a new way to shop. Online. It was big before. It's imperative now. Are you ready to receive your share of online sales? Keep the trade routes open to more customers with an eCommerce site. It might cost less than you expect to get started and we can teach you how to update your products yourself.

CLICK & COLLECT

Reduce unnecessary in-store time and face-to-face contact with 'Click & Collect'. Have customers browse from the comfort of their couch, pay online and pick up from your collection point. Set rules like how many orders you can handle at a time and lock slots when you're too busy. Even sync your online store with your physical stock levels.

DELIVERY

Don't come to us, we'll come to you. Deliveries were one of the first things to soar as lockdown measures commenced. As restrictions get tighter, demand is not going to disappear. Scheduling deliveries and collections can ease pressure and avoid crowding. Ask about adding delivery functionality to your website.

BOOKINGS

Some businesses are being asked to limit the number of people on the premises at any one time. That could make no appointment necessary a thing of the past. Clever booking systems for all industries will be popping up in their place. Need to integrate with your existing reservation system? Just let us know what you're using.
